For Fans of... Sufjan Stevens, Ultimate Painting, Bob Dylan

Since the release of his critically acclaimed album Clean, alt-folk songwriter Gallery 47 aka Jack Peachey has been preparing to share his colourfully political follow up album, Adversity Breeds. The first single to be taken from the album is Analytical & Open, out on 1st September 2017 via AWAL / Bad Production Records.

Amongst Jack's supporters are BBC Radio 2's Bob Harris, BBC 6music's Tom Robinson, Amazing Radio, The Guardian, Drowned in Sound, Clash and Folk Radio to name a few. Gallery 47 has also supported a number of well established acts like Paul Weller, Alice Phoebe Loe, Ian McCulloch and Andrew Montgomery as well as playing on the BBC Introducing stage at T in the Park.

Jack explains "Analytical & Open is a song written over a period of different times. The guitar structure comes from when I was 16, around 10 years ago, but working with session musicians opened up many nice and interesting doors. The lyrics, however, are generally quite fresh". The single portrays an implosion in a friendship whereby two people have become too close and as a result, anger divulges them.

Gallery 47 originally formed ten years ago as a six-piece band in Loughborough. Once the band went their separate ways, Jack decided to continue as a solo artist under the same name, becoming a regular on the live circuit in Nottingham and currently in his new home of South East London. Jack called upon a number of the same musicians who performed on Clean to play on Adversity Breeds, introducing a sense of familiarity to the latter, entwined with layers of texture and emotion throughout.

Analytical & Open is out on 1st September 2017 via AWAL / Bad Production Records.
