“...bewitching...” - Songwriting Magazine

Indie-folk duo The Frampton Sisters return with the release of their heartwarming new single Let Me Hold Your Hand, out 31st January 2020 via Dharma Records.

Intimately acoustic, Let Me Hold Your Hand pulls at the heartstrings instantly. Sisters Freddie and Charlie Frampton's haunting vocal soars effortlessly over the gentle plucks of the guitar strings, creating a sound that is both delicate and warm. Talking about the single, Freddie elaborates, “this song follows two people and their love story. Its about how through everything they’ve gained, and lost, they’ve always had each other, which is what is most important, because at the end of the day we’re all looking for that someone who’ll let us hold their hand.”

Born and raised on the island of Sanday in the Orkney, The Frampton Sisters were both home-schooled from an early age. They then relocated to East Sussex to allow Charlie to begin secondary school whilst still honing their skills as aspiring songwriters. Charlie went on to spend two years at London’s prestigious Brit School and meanwhile, Freddie would give birth to her little baby boy. They have continued to develop their songwriting skills throughout this period, enabling them to reach the finals of the BBC Radio 2 Folk Awards in 2018, as well as performing at the acclaimed Cambridge Folk Festival. The sisters’ debut single Birds Of A Feather received acclaim from numerous well-regarded publications including Folk Radio UK, Americana UK and Songwriting Magazine to name a few, as well as BBC Radio London's Robert Elms.

Catch The Frampton Sisters live next at their single launch on Wednesday, 5th February 2020 at The Slaughtered Lamb, London.

Let Me Hold Your Hand is out on 31st January 2020 via Dharma Records.
